Don't bite the hands that feeds you

There is an African saying that you don't throw mud in the well that gives you water. It is the same as the saying don't bite the hand that feeds you. These sayings reinforce the message that there are many people around you who care and love you, and who want to help you, no matter what! This is often easier said than done, particularly when people are rude to each other, or disrespectful to teachers and to parents. This is the message that I have been discussing with the children in assemblies this week, as I encounter many situations of poor behaviour towards friends and teachers in classrooms, as well as receiving phone calls from residents and visits from social workers, and community police officers, regarding anti social behaviour in and around Coalville. There are simple ways to stop unkindness and anti-social behaviour and these consist of; strict boundaries regarding morning and evening routine's, and having respect for those people who are older. Some people would call this good parenting, I would call it common sense and respecting those that care, look after us and provide us with food, warmth and love.

Mr. Dax

Palitoy & Toy Exhibition

Over 400 fantastical exhibits bring the Star Wars toy story to life, with one-off prototype items, striking star pieces, iconic poster art, dioramas, and much more, at the Leicester Museum & Art until Sept.

Coalville Theatre Festival

Belvoirdale are proud to be part of the Coalville Theatre Festival from 19th to 21st June with their forty minute Shakespeare version of A Midsummer Night's Dream and there are some fantastic shows being performed at the Century Theatre.
