NEWSLETTER

Dear Parents and Carers,

Last Friday, we welcomed parents into school for our annual Scarecrow Making Afternoon, and what a wonderful time we had! It was fantastic to see so many families working together, sharing laughter, creativity, and a true sense of community spirit. The finished scarecrows look absolutely brilliant and make a perfect backdrop for our Harvest celebrations. A big thank you to Reverend Ruth and to everyone who donated stuffing/clothing and to all who were able to help join in and help make the afternoon such a success. Our scarecrows are displayed on the playground.

On Monday, our Year 6 pupils enjoyed a fantastic trip to Whippletree Farm, creating clay animals and making smoothies. Many thanks to Lucy, Sam, and Charlie for making these trips happen and ensuring our children have a life long understanding of the importance of sustainability and protecting the environment.

Wednesday saw our first Franken Teddy Workshop with Ernie Y6, who spoke passionately about the toy industry and its challenges with mass production and waste. Inspired by his message, our pupils got creative—upcycling old and unwanted teddies into unique, reimagined toys! The workshop encouraged everyone to think about recycling and sustainability, and we hope this mindset will continue to grow throughout the school.

Building on this theme, our School Council will soon be organising a Toy Swap later this term, just in time for the Christmas gifting season. Please start setting aside any unwanted toys ready to bring in for swapping – a lovely way to give old favourites a new home.

We look forward to seeing you all at our Harvest Festival on Friday afternoon at the Church. Finally, a huge thank you to the PTFA for organising the upcoming Halloween Disco – always a highlight of the term!

Have a lovely weekend.

SEND Signpost - Helping Children Through Parental Separation

The Netflix movie Spellbound tells a story about a girl whose parents turn into monsters after they separate. It uses fantasy to show what divorce can feel like for kids—confusing and scary—but it also sends a hopeful message: Even if parents separate, their love for their children remains.

This kind of story helps kids understand that big changes in their family are not their fault, and that they are still deeply loved.

Why Children Need Emotional Support - Children going through separation often don't know how to express what they feel. They may not have the words to explain their sadness, anger, or confusion. That's why it's important they have a space—whether it's through stories, play, or conversation—where their feelings can be seen, heard, and accepted.

When we give them that space, we help them feel safe and supported, even during hard times.

What Parents Can Do: Advice from Parenting Expert Dr. Vanessa Lapointe

Dr. Vanessa Lapointe, a parenting educator and psychologist, offers simple but powerful ways to support children through divorce:

Stay Calm and Reassuring

- Divorce is stressful for children.
- They need at least one adult to stay calm and steady.
- Even if parents don't agree, children should feel like both are working together.
- This helps them feel safe and loved by both parents.

Be Careful With Words

- Don't speak badly about your ex-partner in front of your child.
- Negative comments can make kids feel like they have to choose sides.
- It makes it hard for them to love both parents freely.
- If you make a mistake, it's okay—just reset and show you're back in your "grown-up" role.

Watch Your Own Reactions

- Divorce can bring up old emotions in parents too.
- Sometimes, adults react from a "hurt child" place, not their mature self.
- Noticing this helps you respond with more calm and care.

Don't Put Kids in the Middle

- Children should never be used as messengers between parents.
- Don't ask them to carry messages, deal with scheduling, or talk about money.
- This puts pressure on them to act like adults—and that's not their job.

Final Thought

Children going through separation need more than just explanations—they need connection. They need parents and caregivers who see their feelings, even when they can't put them into words.

By being calm, kind, and emotionally present, we help them feel secure and loved—no matter how the family structure changes.
